Journal of English Language Teaching (JELT)

Founded in 1965, the Journal of English Language Teaching (JELT) is India's longest-standing and most respected journal in the field of English language education. As the flagship publication of the English Language Teachers' Association of India (ELTAI), JELT serves as a scholarly forum for English language educators, teacher trainers, and researchers to exchange academic insights and evidence-based pedagogical practices.

As a UGC CARE-listed journal, JELT upholds rigorous academic standards and contributes to the advancement of research in English language teaching. This international, double-blind, peer-reviewed journal is published bimonthly, producing six issues annually. Committed to fostering professional development in English language teaching and research, JELT accepts submissions throughout the year, facilitating a sustained academic discourse on emerging trends and best practices in ELT. For further information on the journal, access to past issues, and submission guidelines, please visit <https://journals.eltai.in/jelt>

Any correspondence related to the Journal of English Language Teaching should be sent to jelt.editor@gmail.com.
